To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to tell you of my experience with Amie Weaver at Springside School in my second grade science class this semester. While I had not previously met Mrs. Weaver, I believe we began and continued to work extremely well together. Mrs. Weaver was more than the traditional student learning to become a teacher. She initiated ideas and maintained supportive contact allowing each student to benefit from the one-on-one teaching that can happen only when two or more teachers are present. Mrs. Weaver's involvement with the students in my science class included asking gently probing questions that helped with assessing the students' grasp of the material.

I could not ask for a better team member in my class. Without my asking her, Mrs. Weaver assisted with wrapping up each class by unobtrusively collecting the tools and material used that day. This allowed me to wind the lesson down without the last minute rush that often comes with teaching multiple classes. She sensed a need and swiftly moved to fill it.

I am not sure what the coming semester and graduation will bring for Mrs. Weaver. But I am confident that she is ready to take on whatever challenges her own classroom might bring with style and grace. I am convinced that Mrs. Weaver possesses the extra element beyond simple text knowledge that will assure her success in any classroom. Any school or district will quickly see all that I have seen in this growing teacher; she has been a rare gift. Much thanks for your time and attention.

Cordially,

Suzanne M. Coleman, M.S.
